Topic-Data Networking

Networking is required to allow multiple computers to connect to each other and share data. There are some basic components which are used for establishing a network, there are switch, router and clients (the laptops or computers).

To connect these computers there are two types of cable:

- Straight cable: This is used for connecting non-identical elements.
  1. Switch to router
  2. Switch to PC or server.
- Crossover cable: This is used for connecting identical elements.
  1. Switch to switch
  2. PC to PC
  3. Hub to hub
  4. Router to router
  5. Switch to hub

Every client (PC or laptop) is identified using a unique name, here known as IP (Internet Protocol) address. It is a 32 bit address divided into 4 octaves each, e.g. : 192.168.10.1,168.187.12.42 etc.

There are 5 types of IP addresses:

- Class A-N.H.H.H
- Class B-N.N.H.H
- Class C-N.N.N.H
- Class D-multicasting
- Class E-Research and Development

The table.1 gives the information about the various IP address (its decimal range, octal bits, network/host ID, subnet mask, number of networks and the no of host per network)
